

Documentation Improvement

Concurrent or Retrospective Review

The need for complete and accurate practitioner documentation is more important than ever to support all the current healthcare reporting requirements that drive revenue.

High quality clinical documentation is just as important in the outpatient setting as it is in the inpatient setting to receive appropriate reimbursement for the care provided. Historically, CDI programs have primarily focused on inpatient services, yet outpatient and clinic settings are just as important because of the link to Hierarchical Condition Categories (HCC) and Alternative Payment Methods (APM).
